Darwin Hybrid tulips
The largest tulip flowers available that bloom on sturdy tall stems. Very showy in the landscape with strong wide foliage.

Double Early tulips
Paeonia-like flowers, where some varieties are semi-double on sturdy stems.

Double Late tulips
These Paeonia type flowering varieties do very well as cut flowers but also make a spectacular display in landscapes.

Lily-flowering tulips
Graceful flowers with very long flower petals. Mostly used for cut flower production and in landscapes.

Parrot tulips
The shorter varieties can be used for pot forcing, where the taller ones are perfect for cut flower production. In general the varieties have very colorful large flowers with unique twisted petals.

Single Early tulips
Great for early cut flower production as well as pot production.

Single Late tulips
Many varieties of this group can be used for cut flower production. The taller, lanky, but graceful varieties are better used in landscapes.

Triumph tulips
Strong compact tulips that can be used for cut flower and pot production. Also do very well in landscapes.
